Kind regards,

AWM

Your careful consideration in this regard is highly appreciated.

included.

We believe that this manuscript is appropriate for publication in Trends in Nursing, since we aimed to gain insight into the use of high fidelity simulation at a nursing school in South Africa. Recommendations on how to improve the learning experience for students are improved to make the learning experience meaningful. With this article, the authors aimed to discuss the insights gained on what students appreciated about their high fidelity learning experiences and what aspects should be for the settings that was used on Turnitin® to create the report. This paper has not been accepted or submitted for publication in any other journal. The unpublished Master's dissertation of the first author contains some of the data included in this article, but refers to the direct quotations of the research participants. For this reason, the attached originality report created by Turnitin®, found a 51% similarity index. Thirty nine present of this similarity is related to the dissertation. Please refer to Addendum A attached for the settings that was used on Turnitin® to create the report.

We would like to submit the attached manuscript, "High Fidelity Simulation in Nursing Education: Considerations for Meaningful Learning," for contemplation as possible publication in Trends in Nursing, FUNDISA journal.
